

Promotion plus⁺

A programme of the Graduate Academy to strengthen career competencies and to build professional networks

In professional life it is not only technical expertise that counts. Employers specifically search for young professionals who are able to combine their specialised knowledge with overall key competencies. Acquiring job-related skills is more important today than ever before for young academics.

With Promotion plus⁺ we offer a programme that helps you develop career competencies and presents career prospects outside academia. At the same time, we support you in establishing professional networks with businesses, the non-profit and the public sector in Hanover and region.

The Graduate Academy's programme Promotion plus⁺ is open to PhD students and postdocs of Leibniz University Hannover.

Programme Structure

According to your individual needs, the programme offers three modules and additional vocational trainings as well as networking opportunities with partners from businesses, the non-profit and the public sector.

Please visit our website for further information on Promotion plus⁺.

Qualification Courses

As a researcher you will be confronted with a variety of tasks – literature research, data collection and presenting your results to the research community or the public – and you will constantly encounter new challenges. We provide – in collaboration with other service facilities of Leibniz University Hannover – a range of qualification workshops especially tailored to young academics.

We offer workshops in the following areas of competence:

- strategies of self-organisation
- communication and presentation techniques
- good scientific practice
- job application and career planning

We collaborate with qualified trainers and coaches who have gained extensive expertise in further education for young academics.

You can browse the current course programme and register for courses online. Please consult our website.
